

New Book

Annual Report on Cyber Rule of Law in China (2018)

Li Lin and Zhi Zhenfeng (eds.), Annual Report on Cyber Rule of Law in China (2018), Social Sciences Academic Press, 2018.

The Annual Report on Cyber Rule of Law in China (2018) (The Blue Book on the Cyber Rule of Law in China) contains monographic researches on a wide range of issues relating to the development of cyber rule of law in China in 2017, including the overall situation of development, the efforts to bring web standards under the rule of law, the protection of key information infrastructure, the construction of the national key data resource protection system, the legal system of cybersecurity, cybercrimes, cyber warfare, management of online public opinion, the responsibility of social media platforms, international trade in cyberspace, the management of cyber ecology, and cross-border data flow, introductions to the results of third-party assessments of the situation of openness of court trial and openness of police affairs, and discussions on the emphases of future legislation on cyberspace.

The book focuses on the major progresses made and main problems faced by China in the field of cyber rule of law, advocates problem-centered monographic researches, and encourages pragmatic countermeasure suggestions, with a view to participating in the development of practices, improving institutions, and upgrading theories in this field. It is a panoramic, full-cycle, and omni-bearing recording and study of main progresses and problems in the development of cyber rule of law in China, which leaves a faithful record for future generations and opens a window to China for foreigners.